Refer to the attached, Operations and Helpful Hints for first-line support.

Using CompuMed System 707 (AT-102)

Operation and helpful hints for over-reading requests and billing

1. How to Use the machine:

1. Prepare Patient
2. Connect Electrodes
3. Press the ON Key to switch System 707 on
 - If you can see ECG traces in the LCD display continue, otherwise check patient cable or leads
 - Jump to step 6 for emergencies only (patient condition leaves no time to enter demographics)
4. Press the Patient Data Key and fill out all needed info
5. Press the RUN TEST Key
6. Press the RUN TEST Key again, System 707 displays "STORING!"
7. System 707 displays "INITIALIZING", "CONNECTING", "DATA OUTPUT" (transmission takes about 2 minutes) *
8. System 707 prints a copy of the ECG report

System 707 prompts for ordering the optional over-read service (a cardiologist's second opinion on the computerized interpretation). Over-reading ECGs is performed by CompuMed Cardiologists 24/7 for a turnaround time of 24 hour for REGULAR and 1 hour for STAT]
9. Using the arrow keys (or arrows displayed above blue soft keys) make a choice, then "SELECT" it
10. System 707 displays "DISCONNECTING"

2. Hints, PLEASE READ and keep with machine:

* The machine automatically transmits the ECG immediately after step 6. So:

1. Do NOT stop the machine from transmitting the ECG (e.g., by pushing the Off button).
2. Give the machine the proper time to automatically transmit your ECG: that time is a bit over 2 minutes. If for any reason the first attempt is not successful, the machine continue on attempting to automatically transmit the ECG, if that is successful the total time (including the first non- successful attempt) is a about 3 minutes. Very rarely the machine needs the 3rd auto attempt.

If for any reason transmission fails, the ECG will go to memory and will need to be transmitted later because there is NO "delete from memory" function. So:

1. Do NOT run another ECG for the same patient, the billing system accounts for every new ECG.
2. Check your phone line and contact CompuMed to troubleshoot the reason for transmission failure
3. To retrieve from memory: push the "menu" button, then "memory", highlight the ECG & "transmit".

To prevent double billing if you had to acquire another ECG for the same patient:

CompuMed will gladly give your site full credit for multiple ECGs collected by mistake for any reason. Your site will only be billed for ONE ECG per patient, given that you [1] transmit ALL ECGs immediately or by the end of the day and [2] you contact CompuMed to submit a list of the ECGs to be credited.

Leaving your machine to store old multiple ECGs until memory is full will only cause billing problems for your site.
